

DAILY DOINGS OF THE DUFFS

DOUBTFUL

A young German officer stopped at a wayside inn in France. He was tired. Upon asking for food the man in charge offered him some nice turkey. The officer pitched into it and after some moments of steady eating he asked:

"Are you certain this is turkey?"

"Yes, absolutely sure," replied the landlord.

"There's no doubt about it, eh?" persisted the officer.

"None whatever," came the answer. A moment later the officer returned to his orderly.

"Fritz," he directed, "saddle out turkeys now."—Everybody's.
